

"THE CRIME OF '73"

Received an Airing at the Sixth Ward Meeting Last Night.

ARNETT AND PENDLETON SPOKE.

So Did Messrs. Dryden and Riley, and the Gist of Their Remarks was Relating to that "Terrible, Terrible Crime." Col. Arnett Says Some Nice Things About His Opponent, and Then Tells Why Times Are Hard. Not a Word Concerning the Tariff or the Wilson Bill.

Dan O'Brien's meeting in the Sixth ward last night was the opening of the campaign on the Popocratic side in that district, and it attracted a very good crowd of people all of whom kept remarkably good order, considering that it was an outdoor meeting. The speaking took place from a platform erected at the base of the pole raised by Mr. O'Brien and his friends some weeks ago, and was participated in by Messrs. Dryden, Riley, Pendleton and Col. W. W. Arnett.

On the platform were seated a large number of the faithful Populists and free silverites, among whom were noted George W. Robinson, Beverly Eoff, Jim Fitzsimmons, Billy Steager, John Shriver, Dr. A. E. Casner, Samuel Hartman, Mike Stein, of Fulton, Charley Stephens, Noah Zane, Dr. Thomas E. Lunsford, John A. White, W. P. Robinson, W. W. Irwin, Joseph Voligt, Dan O'Brien and others.

At 8 o'clock Mr. Joseph Voligt called the meeting to order and introduced the first speaker, M. F. Dryden. None of the other speakers had arrived up to this time and it was necessary for Mr. Dryden to keep up a whirlwind of pointless oratory for some time. It was with apparent relief that he noticed as Congressman John O. Pendleton advancing, and he lost no time in winding up his talk.

To fill in the time, it was suggested that Mr. Pendleton address the crowd, which he did with his usual grace and gestures. He began by explaining that this was his first appearance on the stage in the garb of a stump speaker for four long years, and that he was once more glad to greet the "hardy flat sons of toil" and tell them just what they needed to place them on an equality with the millionaires of the country.

He said that the money of the country was unfairly and partially distributed, and that the Democratic party of the year was going to lift the laboring man, his right to the right, right beside the robbing millionaire. He referred to Bryan—the Moses of the nineteenth century and said God Almighty had sent him to the earth to lift up the downtrodden masses. He called attention to the fact that in 1860 there were not over two hundred millionaires in the whole country, while to-day there are 30,000 of them and the population more than doubled. He couldn't understand why it is that so many men could get rich and so many have to stay poor and work for a living. "That is the problem of the hour," said the speaker, "and you men are now called upon to cast your votes whether you favor a change in the existing policies or not, and I feel assured you will cast them right."

He's Not an Anarchist.

Mr. Pendleton desired to impress upon them the fact that he was not an anarchist, but he didn't see why the people should create any more millionaires than they had already. He said that legislation in the past thirty years had been in favor of the rich man and that now Bryan was going to "make a change in the business all around." He dwelt on the "crime of 1873" and said that the demonization of silver was made in the dark and that Congressmen had voted for the bill who didn't know what they were voting for, and it was a deep-laid plot to make the rich richer and the poor poorer. Mr. Pendleton might have added that it was owing to "ignorance" of the matter that Senator Stewart voted for the "crime."

He said it was appalling the amount of English and European capital that has been invested in syndicates in this country and called attention to the assertion that most of the railroads were owned and controlled by English money, and nearly one-half of the breweries. "But," said the speaker, "the people by their votes for free silver in November will change this condition of affairs and the British lion will put its tail between its legs and will be glad to fly across the ocean."

Then he referred to Mr. Bryan's "crown of thorns" and "cross of gold," but the crowd didn't catch on to it as the speaker evidently expected it to, for he worked it up to the highest pitch in his speech and it fell flat. He closed by saying that the Chicago nominees stood for honest policies and that the election of Bryan would be the first blow struck for the relief of the workingman in the last thirty years. By this admission it appears that John O. has come to the conclusion that the Wilson bill was not a blow struck in that direction.

At the conclusion of Mr. Pendleton's talk, Mr. May's band was appropriately played. "When Johnnie Comes Marching Home."

Col. Arnett Talks.

The chairman introduced the next speaker as "the next congressman from the grand old first district of West Virginia, and Col. W. W. Arnett stepped forward, being greeted with a liberal round of applause.

The colonel began by saying he had the highest personal regard for his opponent and in fact, all the candidates on the Republican ticket, and credited them as being honest and trustworthy men in every particular, and said that his campaign would be made on the issue before the people and not by personal abuse. He said the doctrine taken up by the Democratic party this year and made a feature of, was not a new one, and spoke of the platform of former campaigns, in which the party declared in favor of a free and unlimited coinage of both gold and silver. He read from a text book, a section of the platform of 1888, in which the party favored honest money both in gold and silver. He read the platform of other years, but it was noticeable that none of them spoke of free coinage of silver at the rate of 16 to 1 until that adopted by the Chicago convention last month.

He called attention to the fact that the country was laboring under a depression which has existed now for several years, and that there had been a general suspension of industry all over the country. He said the working man wanted to know what was the matter, and they, by their votes in November, would demand that the conditions be changed. At this juncture a man in the crowd suggested that the country has only had hard times since Cleveland and a Democratic Congress was elected, but that it is not the policy of the Democratic speakers to refer to Mr. Cleveland's administration or to the tariff this year, the crowd received no enlightenment on this score.

The speaker said that the policy suggested by Mr. Bryan had never been used in this country but it had in other countries and proved successful, and he said he would give the new bill a trial and see how it would work for a few years. He said that under the existing laws the working man was oppressed and that he was sure the new way would not make their conditions any worse.

Gives It to the Bolters.

The colonel referred to the bolters by saying that he respected them and believed that they were conscientious in their convictions, but he desired to call attention to the personality of the bolters, and said that two-thirds of them were either bankrupt or interested in some way in the exchange of money. He said they were rich men and they would naturally vote to protect their interests. He further said Lombard street in London, and Wall street in New York, were against free coinage the same as the bankers, and it was a campaign of the rich against the poor. He said that the statistics show that we have $24 per capita, but he figured it down and his figure gives only $12 or $13 per capita, about one-half of the figure given out by the treasury.

He said there was not enough gold in the world to pay a bonded indebtedness and for this reason the country should coin silver enough to pay the national debt and increase the circulating currency. "The wealth of the world," said Col. Arnett, "is made from free raw material, and the vast quantities of coal in the earth and the timber on the earth furnish labor for men who must be paid for that labor, and there should be more money in circulation to pay the men for the labor they give in mining the coal and the timber of this coal. The colonel here had a splendid opportunity to come out favoring a reformation of the tariff on these commodities, but he failed to take advantage of it.

It was at this point that the colonel, following on the heels of Mr. Pendleton, took up the "crime of '73," and like that gentleman, characterized the participants as arch conspirators. He referred to how they had destroyed half of the lawful money of the country, but he failed to mention the amount of silver in circulation before "the crime" was enacted and compare it with the amount of silver in circulation to-day. He went back to the days of Rome and told how the demonization of silver caused the overthrow of that mighty nation and urged the people to think well before they voted to permit the United States to suffer like disaster. He cautioned them to leave the affairs of the government in the hands of the party that had never deceived them, the party that never failed to legislate in favor of "the masses against the classes." If they would do this he promised them that the currency would be increased and that "hard times would never come no more."

Mr. Riley Appears.

Attorney General Riley was present and was called upon to address the crowd. He said he would only say a word, and that was to urge the people to support the state ticket. To keep the administration of the state affairs in the hands of the party that has guarded it so well for twenty-five years. He evidently did not agree with Mr. Pendleton's kick on foreign railroad capital coming into the state, for he pointed with pride to the fact that in the past twenty-five years every county but three had been pierced by a railroad running through it.

Mr. Riley said that he desired to keep his voice for some future time, when he would be heard on all the issues of the day, therefore he would bring his speech to a close.

The applause throughout the meeting was very limited, and if it had not been for the gentlemen on the platform the speeches would have been received with any manifestations whatever. As it was the demonstration was very ordinary, and while the crowd was very creditable in size, it was by no means enthusiastic.

Mayor's band furnished some good music during the meeting which served to liven things up considerably.

Political Notes.

The Deacons club of the Eighth ward, will meet to-night to arrange for their big outing, which has been announced for Friday. Every member is expected to be present at the meeting.

There will be a McKinley and Hobart pole raising at Selbert's Garden next Saturday afternoon which promises to draw a large crowd. There will be good speakers present and a general good time is assured.

The Republicans of Bridgeport held a rousing meeting last night and organized a club for the campaign. N. B. Wilson was elected president, E. Trueman first vice president, C. A. Junkins second vice president, A. Sullivan, third vice president, Benjamin Job fourth vice president, John Fassett secretary, Captain McConaughy treasurer.

The meeting drew up strong resolutions to support the ticket, and over 150 voters signed the roll. They will meet again to-morrow night.

The W. J. Bryan Silver Club met last night and beside transacting other business, elected P. H. Dolan first lieutenant, W. F. Beck second lieutenant and F. H. Mansfield third lieutenant. They will meet again next Monday night to adopt their uniform.

The nobly Elkins Cadets will meet at the Old Fellows hall to-night at eight o'clock to transact important business. Additional arrangements for uniforms will be taken and the subordinate marching officers elected. A full turn out of the members is requested.

An Object Lesson.

A lady from New Bedford, Mass., who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Kellogg, gives a splendid object lesson on the free coinage of silver. She has received a letter from New Bedford concerning a relative who went from that place to Guatemala to work. The young man was promised seven dollars a day and went supposing he would receive dollars worth 100 cents on the dollar as we do in the United States.

He was paid in silver dollars worth thirty-seven cents each and not 100 cents as he supposed. Instead of getting 700 cents a day he got only 259 cents per day, 44 less than he expected. He wrote home that he was disgusted with that kind of a dollar and asked for sufficient money to bring him back to the United States, and it has been sent to him.

He says that if free silver Guatemala an ordinary meal costs $1.25 and flour is $18 per barrel. He wants no free silver in his.

The Event of the Season.

The employees of Mozart Park will give a grand picnic Thursday, from 2 o'clock until 12 p. m. at the park. Mayor's band will furnish the music. All the friends of the park and the faithful employees who do so much to contribute to the pleasure of the citizens of the park will doubtless turn out and enjoy the occasion. The Wheeling base ball team will be among the guests of honor.

"TARIFF CHAMPIONS."

A Ringing Call to the Old Guard to Organize for the Campaign.

The well known and effective organization of four years ago is going to reorganize next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at Old Fellows' hall, corner of Twelfth and Chapline streets. In the last campaign this was perhaps the showiest club and attracted more attention than any in Wheeling, and strange to say, the uniform cost less than that of any other club. It was for the purpose of allowing anyone, no matter what his occupation and circumstances were, to become a member.

It is hoped that all voters, regardless of political creed, who are in favor of "sound money and protection," puddlers, farmers, merchants, coal miners, and all other wage workers and business men, will attend and join in the reorganization next Thursday evening.

Will be Buried To-day.

In the case of Rev. A. R. Perrill, the old man who died from heat at the Harris homestead on "Wheeling" hill last Friday, very little is new, except that the body is still at Schroeder's undertaking establishment, and unless some friends or relatives communicate with Coroner Schultz in the meantime, they will be buried by the county this afternoon.

A letter from Chief of Police Heaton, of Parkersburg, says he don't know the man, but that he had found that E. E. Hager, who was said to be a relative, lived a few miles from Parkersburg, but was not at home when he called and the family did not know when he would be. The coroner also received a letter from Mr. W. F. Poe, of Parkersburg, who said he knew the old man to be a preacher, and that he had always registered at the hotels as coming from Spencer, W. Va.

Charged with Trespass.

Robert Mehen and Mike Moran entered Louis Larn's house the other evening without being invited in. In fact they were not welcome, and Justice Phillips, before whom they were made accountable, fined them $5 and costs.

A Bold Robbery.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 17.—Three or more clever cracksmen succeeded in blowing open the safe in the Beach Side hotel at Owen Farms, about three o'clock this morning and they got safely away with its contents, which consisted of about $1,200 in checks and a quantity of jewelry, the property of the guests. There are about 150 persons staying at the hotel, and the most of these were thrown into confusion by the sound of the explosion which awakened the hotel staff. Some guests started down stairs, but as the robbers were in the dark and they in the light a threat of the robbers to shoot kept them in the back until the cracksmen had escaped. Afterwards the nightwatchman was found lying in a stupor, which was evidently caused by chloroform, and with his hands secured tied. He remained unconscious for several hours. No arrests have been made.

Perjurer Seward Arrested.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 17.—John Seward, a detective, was brought to Newport, Ky., to-day under arrest for subornation of perjury in the trials of Jackson and Wallace. Seward was indicted for introducing William Trust and Carrie Evans as witnesses whom he had rehearsed, to prove that Pearl Bryan was found dead on the Ohio side of the river. When his witnesses were broken down, Seward escaped and three officers have been hunting him several months.
